whose faultiess personation of CALES PLINMER,
EQUAL, IP NOT SEPERIOR, TO "SOLON SMINGLE," has firmly established his fame as the GREATEST OF LIVING COMEDIANS. ADDITIONAL QUOTATIONS FROM THE CRIMICAL PRESS. THE TRIBUNE SAYS.—

It is impossible to estimate too highly the skilful grace, the refused taste and the true judgment which he displayed. * all is earnest, subdued, gerdie and natural. The pathos of many of his scenes is irregistible, and few among the auditnesses of the second act, in which, while full of removes at having thoughtestly wounded her, he endeavers to divert her adness by chirping fragments of a song, in a broken voice, is as touching a picture as we have ever witnessed. And the expression of overwhelming delight which he manifests by quaint isovements and gostures on recovering his lost son, almost fearing to approach birm, and healtiding for a while to lay hands upon him, but the happy reality sheald prove an fluston if zordely tested, above a power and feeling far beyond any similar codes or which we can move call to mind. Effects 1000... It are continuely steples and to were personn. The tribuse persons proceed the province of the contractions which approach perfection.

THE TIMES SATS:— The sciat which Mr. Owens secured by his render! Solon Shingle is enhanced by his delicate matural protriof the old toymaker. * Mr. Owens, in fact, in Plummer, makes a sensation. THE COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER SAYS:—
the part of the toymaker he has given fresh proof power. He thoroughly masters his audience. FIGARO SAYS IN THE REVIEW:—
If the stage has ever produced a portrait in which humor and pathos, tenderness and strength, simplicity and subtleness were more artistically and effectively combined, I have yet to see it. I doubt if Dickens him-elf, when he created the great original, had a more distinct conception of the character than is given us by Mr. Owens. THE COURIER SAYS:—
It is making as much talk already as Solon Shingle OR,
THE CRICKET ON THE HEARTH.
